

Example of coarsening network structure

- Newman & Girvan 2004
- co-authorship network of physicists writing papers on networks
- clustering algorithm identifies different subcommunities
- each node is a community – size represents number of authors
- each edge thickness represents the number of co-author pairs between communities

(Image Sources: Lada Adamic)

